Navigating the Name-Change Process

Are you changing to your new married name? As the name-change process can be seemingly undefined, we, at MissNowMrs.com have made all efforts to simplify this process and make it more enjoyable for you!

MissNowMrs.com was created to save you the hours of time typically spent on research and form completion. We are here to assist you in changing to your married name, answer questions, provide you with your options, and most of all allow you to focus on the fun of being a newlywed! Have questions? Call us at: 800.301.9296.

Here is how it works:

After your wedding you will want to request at least one additional copy of your certified marriage certificate to use during the name-change process. Some state and U.S. Government offices need a certified marriage certificate as legal proof of your marriage before they can process your name-change request. Other offices will accept a photo copy of your marriage certificate.

When you are ready to get started, you are welcome to register for an account with us at:

www.MissNowMrs.com where you will have six months access to your account through your email and password. We will ask you a series of questions online, which generally takes about 25 minutes. Keep in mind, you may log out of your account at any time return to pick up where you left off. Once you have finished, you may print off all of your auto-completed forms. Along with each state and U.S. Government form, we provide you with detailed filing instructions and the mailing addresses for each one, specific to your location. Once you have submitted your name-change forms, each office takes about two weeks to up-date their records and they will return your documents to you with your new married name! We look forward to assisting you go from Miss...Now...Mrs!

Congratulations on your marriage! www.MissNowMrs.com
